LYNCHBURG HORSE SHOW

It Will Be One of the Finest Ever Witnessed.

LIST OF ENTRIES LARGE

Northerners Have Entered Their Horses and Best of South Will Be There. Fine Lady Riders Who Will Show Their Horses.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) LYNCHBURG, VA., September 28 .-A peep at the list of entries to the events

A peep at the list of entries to the events of the Lynchburg Horse Show discloses the largest and most brilliant line of entries that has ever been seen in this section of the State. There are four hundred and nine, all told, and so large is the list that the association found it necessary, and to-day gave rush orders for the building of twenty-five new box stalls to accommodate the crowded entry list.

The size of the strings and the equality of the individual horses coming is beyond the management's most sanguine hopes. That the furor over Horse Shows is a fewer in Virginia is shown by the fact that despite the constant and continued interest in the dozen Virginia Horse Shows already given this season, the spirit is stronger, and Lynchburg will have three times as many horses here as last year.

Especially noticeable is the fact evidenced in the Lynchburg list that the northern people are joining with the southern people in the sport. Mrs. John Gerken, of New York, who schools her own horses, will bring a select string to Lynchburg from her stables, bringing the horses that she, herself, always rides and drives at Bryn Mawr, Madison Square Garden and Newport. Virginia horsemen will see here for the first time the Gerken horses, Lady Dainty and Petroleum, Branden and Belmar, Newsboy and Shopgirl.

Mr. Julian Morris brings twenty hunters and jumpers.

The judges who will decide the awarding of the prizes are men of national note in horse circles. They are Mr. William H. Collier, Mr. George B. Hulme, A. Butler Duncan and Mr. Charles Pfizer, Jr., master Essex (Long Island) hounds: Mr. Stuart Diffenderffer and Mr. Arthur Chichester, Philadelphia.

Up at Newport a fortnight ago those cliff-dwellers thought themselves lucky with one lady rider. Here is a list of horsewomen who are easily equal to any in the country, whether it be in mounts on hunters or showing their horses before the wheels. Some of the noted horsewomen who will ride or drive their own horses at the Lynchburg show are Miss Gertrude Skelton, Richmond; Miss Henry, Winchester: Mrs. Nanne Langhorne Shaw, Albemarle; Mrs. Blair Johnson and Mrs. F. EXCITING RACE WITH HORSE THIEF

Captures Stolen Horse.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

DOSWELL, VA., September 28.—An exciting horse race between Mr. T. B. Doswell and a horse thief occurred early this morning. The stolen horse was recovered, but the thief escaped. A fleet-footed horse, the property of a tenant on the Bullfield farm, was stolen early this morning by a strange white man, who rode to the yard of Mr. Bernard Doswell and inquired of his wife whether they had any horses for sale. After being informed in the negative the stranger departed. Shortly after the theft was reported, and Mr. Doswell, attired in his night clothes only, set out in pursuit, armed with a shotgun. Overtaking the escaping thief, Mr. Doswell commanded him to halt, threatening to shoot if he did not obey. The man calmly beckoned him to follow and rode on.

Mr. Doswell shot four times while both horses were running at their best speed, but failed to stop the thief. After getting another supply of shells he again pursued.

For about eight miles the race continued, and during the time ten shots had been fired into the man's back at close range without any apparent effect. As a last effort to stop him a boy got alongside and attempted to grab him. The thief slid down on the opposite side, pulled off the halter and ran off. Two more shots were fired into him, and yet without effect. It seems probable that the man was either clothed in builet-proof garments or was insane and disregarded his injures.

The horse was shot and had been run so rapidly that it will be useless if it does not die. The thief is described as being about twenty years of age, medium height, clean shaven, with dark hair. He wore a felt hat resembling those worn in the army. When last seen he was traveling in the direction of Hanover Courthouse.

News of New Linens.

Linens You Can Trust.

When you find an item you can trust you have gone a long way towards being satisfied.

To satisfy folks in Linens has long been a success with us.

People believe in our Linens because long acquaintance with these particular makes has proved every excellence and made certain all that we claim for them.

To-day—aside from their absolute purity, perfect bleaching and great durability—we point to the fact that the proverbial beauty of designs in former gatherings is wholly eclipsed by the present exquisite showing.

Take, for example, these pieces, on display, for your polished table; made of finest pure linen, with hand-made Dutch torchon; made to shape—no seams—and inserted in squares and circles. Who that loves a pretty table could keep down a feeling of admiration on beholding them? Then there are Montmelleck embroideries, drawn-work and damask pieces in scarfs, squares, circles and ovals, and scores of odd patterns that go to make the assortment complete. But the principal strength, where most usefulness is found and much moneysaving is possible, is amongst the

BRISTOL, VA., Sept. 28.—The novel thing of a building in the South, erected for the exclusive use of a Salvation Army corps, has been accomplished in Bristol, and the handsome new building was dedicated with appropriate exercises vesterday afternoon. The new building was dedicated with appropriate exercises yesterday afternoon. The new building was provided by the local corps, with the assistance of citizens. One of the foremost promoters of the idea of an independent house of worship for the army people was Major A. D. Reynolds, one of Bristol's wealthiest citizens. Major Reynolds not only donated a site for the building in the heart of the city, but subscribed liberally to the building fund, enabling a corps that is decidedly poor in this world's goods to provide a building worth $3,000.

The dedication was participated in by the Mountain Brigade of the Salvation Army, headed by Colonel Richard E. Holz. The services were highly impressive and were largely attended. The open air meetings during the day attracted large crowds. The Mountain Erigade has met with a most cordial reception in the city on the border of two States. Colonel Holz and members of his staff were entertained at the hospitable home of Major A. D. Reynolds. The series of meetings held by the brigade were concluded with a big mass meeting last night, in which many enthusiastic voices were mingled in song and praise. The brigade left Bristol to-day for Knoxville, Tenn.
